

A Comparative Study of Communications in Big Game
Margaret Altmann
Professor of Psychology Emeritus
University of Colorado
Project Number 124

A report on this past summer's work on this project is not available at this time, however, the study of communication systems of wild ungulates was continued. The social role of subordinate animals in the big game groups received special attention. Evaluation of data collected is currently under way.

Assisted by Miss Betty Erickson, Boulder, Colorado.