♦ CLASS OVERVIEW

Since its inception as a Summer Innovative Course in 2000, the Department of Art summer Outdoor Studio class has been exceptionally grateful for the opportunity to stay at the AMK Research Station as part of the three week summer intensive. For art students, the dramatic setting and accommodation are inspiring and it is a highlight of the experience. Art students also appreciate the interaction with students from different disciplines in the sciences and often those conversations have direct impact on the creative work student's produce during their stay. The AMK staff and in particular Professor Hank Harlow have offered us incredible hospitality and generosity. Our stay at the AMK always culminates in an exhibition of student and faculty creative work, hosted by Hank Harlow, UW NPS Research Station Director.
